The manager at a Rochester Hills car repair shop used a handgun to shoot a radio near an employee's work area, police say. The incident was reported to the Oakland County Sheriff's Office.

The incident happened at 4:24 p.m. Thursday at Avon Radiator on Auburn Road.

The employee called for help after the incident, but he told sheriff's deputies he did not feel threatened, according to police.

He "believed his boss thought he was being funny by shooting the radio," the report stated.

Sheriff's deputies interviewed the manager, a 64-year-old Orion Township resident, who admitted to shooting planning for awhile; there were two handguns recovered at the scene, the report stated.

The incident remains under investigation.
