A 51-year-old Shelby Township woman is being held in the Oakland County Jail after reportedly driving while intoxicated into an electronic school speed limit sign and then a utility pole in Rochester Hills on Wednesday morning.

The incident happened at 6:02 a.m. in the area of Auburn Road and Barclay Circle, according to a report from the Oakland County Sheriff's Office.

The woman was driving a GMC Jimmy, which struck the speed sign and the pole on the side of the road, the report stated.

The results of a preliminary breath test showed the woman's blood alcohol level to be .34 percent, the report stated. She was arrested for operating while intoxicated and taken to an area hospital before being cleared to be taken to the jail, according to the sheriff's office.
